An interview with Wincey Terry-Bryant

Winceyco founded Winceyco, a performance arts company, in 1988 to combine her love for music, education, and children. Winceyco teaches audiences about serious social issues in schools throughout New York and New Jersey. The productions are curriculum-based educational programs that marry music and National Core and are NJEA certified. Winceyco programs offer alternative approaches to learning by integrating performing arts techniques such as music, drama, and dance to teach various topics, including black history, Latinx history, women’s history, human trafficking, drug awareness, cancer awareness, and other subjects. The participatory format requires students to exercise critical thinking, social skills, and more throughout the performance. The troupe includes professional actors, singers, dancers, and musicians. Character Rocks is one of Winceyco’s productions.

In addition to the theatrical productions, Terry-Bryant founded the publishing arm of her business in 2010. Among her book offerings is the published version of Character Rocks, complete with illustrations and a Spanish translation.

What is the message you would like children to take away from this performance? It’s cool to do the right thing.

Why did you use rocks—rather than actual people or even animals—to stand in for your character traits? To take advantage of the opportunity to play on the words “character rocks”. Also to infer that it takes some strength and toughness to demonstrate character.

How do you think children will respond to the performance? Kids are going to have lots of fun singing along and learning a lot.

What prompted you to propose a performance for younger children on character education? The path to a better society is through our children. The best time to plant the seeds of good character is when they are young and impressionable. It’s like working with a clean slate.

What are the most important character traits young children should learn—and why? Respect affects how you treat others and also yourself. Kids cannot learn to be positive on the outside if they cannot maintain a positive inward perspective.

Kindness - the character Carly learns from the kindness rock that you don’t have to mirror the negative behaviors that you see. Kindness is a choice. You can be kind even if someone is not so kind to you.

CITIZENSHIP - studies show that a high EQ is just as important as a high IQ. It is critically important that our students learn to get along with their friends and neighbors.

<th>Prepare for the performance</th>
<th>Review with your students what it means to “Do the Right Thing”. Breakdown the word RIGHT into an acronym standing for Respect, Integrity, Generosity, Honesty, and Truth, all of which are core character values that you would look for in a good person and friend. Discuss with them the meaning of those words and how having these character traits will make each of them a rock star in their own way. Teach them the sign language symbols for each of these traits.</th>
<th>Have students write one word of their choice, each on a rock with a sharpie you supply, which illustrates one of the core character traits of doing the right thing. (They may go outside of the box if it applies to positive character traits). They can discuss a time or experience when they used that specific word or had someone use it towards them. Then they can all place their rocks together and create their own rock garden collectively as a class.</th>

<tr>
<td>E</td>
<td>Experience the performance</td>
<td>As you are waiting for the performance to begin, ask your students to experience the performance with all of their senses. How does the performance make them feel? What parts of the performance speak to them most strongly?</td>
<td>Do the inanimate objects (rocks) come to life for you through the actors and actresses performances, costumes and music? Did you learn anything about the core character values discussed earlier in the classroom? How does the performance make you feel?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>R</td>
<td>Reflect, respond and read</td>
<td>Ask the students to discuss a scene or song from the performance that they feel reflected the core values discussed earlier. Do they think this was a successful way of representing a lesson, while making it fun? Can they relate the scene or song to an experience they’ve had in their lives? Read out loud to your students Kindness is Cooler Mrs. Ruler by Margery Cuyler.</td>
<td>Discuss a scene or song from the performance that you feel reflected the core values discussed earlier. Do you think this was a good way of showing a lesson, while making it fun? Can you relate a scene or song from the performance to an experience you’ve had in your life? Read the book Kindness is Cooler Mrs. Ruler by Margery Cuyler.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>F</td>
<td>Focus</td>
<td>Have students work on the activity assignment for “Kindness is Cooler” for an in class assignment or for homework. Have students focus on details from the story to answer their questions. When students are finished with their assignment, encourage them to begin thinking of ways they can perform their own acts of kindness they can do in school and at home. Challenge them by asking if they think they can beat the score of Mrs. Ruler’s class?</td>
<td>Work on questions 1-6 on your activity assignment for “Kindness is Cooler”. Read or listen to details from the book to help you answer the questions. After you have completed the activity, think about ways that YOU can perform your OWN acts of kindness, similar to the students in Mrs. Ruler’s class. Do you think your class together can beat the score of Mrs. Ruler’s class?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>O</td>
<td>Originate</td>
<td>For the first week, have students make a list of at least 5 acts of kindness they performed at home. (They are encouraged to do as many as they can). At the end of the week have students share their acts of kindness list with the rest of the class for show and tell. (Week 2) Have students create another list of acts of kindness that they performed in school. Again, have students share their list with the class at the end of the week. Refer to Activity Assignment 2 for Kindness is Cooler Mrs. Ruler.</td>
<td>Create a list seeing how many acts of kindness you can perform at home. After you’ve done writing your list, be prepared to share your acts of kindness list with the rest of your classmates and teacher in school. (Week 2) Create another list seeing how many acts of kindness you can do in school this time. After you’ve done writing your list, be prepared to share your acts of kindness list with the rest of your classmates and teacher in school. (See if you can do the most acts of kindness in your class)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>R</td>
<td>Rehearse</td>
<td>Break the classroom into groups of 4-5 students and have them share their lists with one another each day leading up to the final day of full class show and tell. Have them compare and contrast any acts of kindness they may have done.</td>
<td>Break up into groups of 4-5 students per group and share your lists with one another each day leading up to the final day of full class show and tell. Compare and contrast with your classmates any acts of kindness they may have done similarly or differently from yours. This may give you some new ideas for acts of kindness you can perform and then add to your list the next day.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>M</td>
<td>Make magic</td>
<td>Set the stage for show and tell and allow for students to read from their list, the acts of kindness which they have performed at home. Facilitate the show and tell and encourage students to clap for one another on their acts of kindness. Ask students how did performing these acts of kindness make them feel?</td>
<td>Share your list of acts of kindness with the class for show and tell! You may read from your list. Be proud of your good deeds and acts of kindness accomplishments! You Rock!</td>

new jersey student learning standards
Character education loosely describes education that helps students develop as moral, civic, good, mannered, behaved, non-bullying, healthy, critical and successful human beings. Concepts that now and in the past have fallen under this term include social and emotional learning, moral reasoning and cognitive development, life skills education, health education, violence prevention, critical thinking, ethical reasoning, and conflict resolution and mediation.

Thomas Lickona, developmental psychologist and professor of education at the State University of New York at Cortland, has said, “Character education is as old as education itself. Down through history, education has had two great goals: to help people become smart and to help them become good.”

The formal teaching of morals and values is not new: it has been part of education throughout history. Plato and Aristotle in 4th century B.C.E Greece believed the role of education was to train good and virtuous citizens. John Locke, the 17th-century democratic philosopher, believed that learning was secondary to virtue.

In America, developing good character in young people was an essential part of the educational mission from the colonial period through the first part of the 20th Century. Character education in school in the United States began with the circulation of the New England Primer. Besides rudimentary instruction in reading, it was filled with Biblical quotes, prayers, catechisms and religiously transmitted moral exhortations.

As religious teachings in the schools came under fire, teachers looked for other ways to impart morals without evoking religion.

Character education, as we know it today, began in the early 1990s. A 1991 book by the afore-quoted Thomas Lickona, Educating for Character, reintroduced the idea that there is a set of common beliefs and values upon which all people can agree. Since the early 1990s, the federal government has embraced the idea of offering character education in public schools and has made grants available to states interested in piloting new character education programs in their schools.

A common approach of current programs is to provide a list of principles, pillars, values or virtues, which are memorized or around which themed activities are planned. It is commonly claimed that the values included in any particular list are universally recognized.

While there has been some controversy as to “whose values are being taught,” most character education programs today are based on traits developed from the civic virtues found in the U.S. Constitution and the United Nations charter—as well as common civil and moral values such as honesty, courage, and respect for others. Advocating that honesty is better than dishonesty, or that free speech is better than censorship, rarely invites controversy.

Recent character education in schools has encompassed bullying and ways to stop it. Bullying is a perennial topic of interest in schools, inviting criticism on how it is handled and ideas on ways to stop it.

School is a fraught time because children are constantly comparing themselves with each other and singling out people who may go against the norm, whether because of different cultural background, income level, clothes, sexual orientation, gender, stigmatized behavior, etc. These different characteristics offer many opportunities for bullies to target people.

Bullying has become more complicated too. It doesn’t just take place in school cafeterias and hallways, but on social media. Stop Bullying programs teach kids that bullying is ethically wrong and harmful, towards the victim and the bully. Some of these programs also teach kids how to identify bullying behavior and how to safely stand up to it. Stopping it, whether verbally to the bully or notifying school leaders or law enforcement can be a complicated issue for children, who are afraid of being stigmatized themselves.

Character education teaches students how to be their best selves, how to do their best work, and how to treat others.

Character Rocks

Vocabulary

Caring
Showing understanding of others by treating them with kindness, compassion, generosity and a forgiving spirit.

Character education
An educational movement that supports the social, emotional and ethical development of students. It is a proactive effort by schools, districts, and states to instill in students important core, ethical values such as caring, honesty, diligence, fairness, fortitude, responsibility, and respect for self and others. Character education provides long-term solutions to moral, ethical, and academic issues that are of growing concern in society and schools.

Character education teaches students how to be their best selves, how to do their best work, and how to treat others.

Citizenship
Being law abiding and involved in service to school, community and country.

Courage
Doing the right thing in the face of difficulty and following your conscience instead of the crowd.

EQ
Abbreviation of Emotional Quotient, a psychological measure of a person’s adequacy in such areas like self-awareness, empathy, and dealing sensitively with other people. People use it as shorthand for the term emotional intelligence. Some experts say the five qualities of emotional intelligence are self-awareness, self-regulation, motivation, empathy, and development of good social skills.

Fairness
Practicing justice, equity and equality. Cooperating with one another. Recognizing the uniqueness and value of each individual within our diverse society.

Honesty
Telling the truth, admitting wrongdoing. Being trustworthy and acting with integrity.

Integrity
Firm adherence to a code of especially moral or artistic values. Being honest, trustworthy and incorruptible.

IQ
A number used to express the apparent relative intelligence of a person. Some critics say these tests don’t encompass other forms of intelligence, such as social intelligence, street smarts, etc.

Kindness
The quality of being friendly, generous, and considerate.

Perseverance
Pursuing worthy objectives with determination and patience while exhibiting fortitude when confronted with failure.

Responsibility
Being accountable in word and deed. Having a sense of duty to fulfill tasks with reliability, dependability and commitment.
